THE LOST TAPES OF MEMPHIS

BBC 4

THE STORY OF PRIMAL SCREAM'S RETURN TO MEMPHIS TO FINALLY PRESS A RECORD WHICH LAY FORGOTTEN IN LEAD GUITARIST ANDREW INNES' BASEMENT FOR OVER 20 YEARS.

"It is a beautifully shot and very candid film following the band as they return to Memphis to rediscover an album that was lost to the world for over twenty-five years. Noel Gallagher is at his acerbic best as he recalls (without any consideration to the person who needed to complete the compliance form) his first encounter with the band's singer Bobby Gillespie."

Phi Dolling, Head of BBC Studios
